

The Ayotzinapa disappearances, part of a phenomenal surge in violence that has left Mexico with 100,000 dead and 25,000 disappeared, have prompted non-stop national and international protests against organized crime, government corruption and impunity.

Renowned public intellectuals, anthropologist Claudio Lomnitz and writer Pedro Angel Palou, will discuss the role of culture in these events, to raise wider questions about what makes for effective political mobilization and renewed civic agency.

Photo: Grupo Mielito 2015

Mexico at a Crossroads: Political Crisis, Civic Agency and Culture

Wednesday, April 1, 2015 - 10:30am

Speakers:

Claudio Lomnitz, Columbia University
Pedro Angel Palou, Tufts University

Moderator: Robin Greeley, University of Connecticut

Room S020, CGIS South
Harvard University
1730 Cambridge Street
Cambridge, MA 02138

Cultural and Humanitarian Agents Seminar
Sponsored by the Mahindra Humanities
Center at Harvard University

